NEW YORK (Reuters) - U.S. stocks ended near record highs on Monday as optimism that trade talks between Washington and Beijing would reach a resolution put pressure on investors to add to their positions as earnings season progressed. Following are some key events in the markets: CALL TRADES Buyers have taken advantage of the steady flow of U.S.-China trade headlines as the two sides seek to work out a permanent settlement, with volatility ebbing this week and today's gains. U.S. President Donald Trump said on Friday he would not hold a news conference on the issue, but on Sunday the Chinese vice premier said the two sides were "basically" in agreement. The United States is seeking an end to what it sees as Chinese trade abuses such as forced technology transfers and intellectual property theft. Trump says he would prefer a trade deal that both countries can agree on. FILE PHOTO: Traders work on the floor of the New York

Stock Exchange shortly after the opening bell in New York, U.S., August 26, 2019. REUTERS/Lucas Jackson Trade data on Friday showed China's imports from the United States fell in July. The S&P 500 e-minis shed about 10 points to 1,835. The Nasdaq e-minis fell about 45 points to 5,082. The Dow Jones Industrial Average e-minis lost about 7 points to 23,249. * * * JOBS Initial jobless claims surged to an 11-year high last week, but the Labor Department said in a report on Friday that the trend could be reversed in coming weeks as the labor market continues to tighten. In the short term, growth of nonfarm payrolls could be volatile due to weather and a monthly census count. Economists polled by Reuters expect the economy to create 157,000 jobs in September. OIL U.S. crude futures settled down 5 cents at $57.52 per barrel, as U.S. production gains in the Permian shale region held support.
